Bulk of Bracy lawsuit is margin of offer, price

By Anne Flasz
Staff Writer

The $925,000 difference between the owner's price for the Bracy Building in Marion and the state's offer to buy it is the bulk of the money sought in a breach of contract suit filed Tuesday against SIU.

Marion attorney James Powless filed the suit in Illinois Court of Claims on behalf of Virginia Cline, owner of the building.

The suit, which alleges that

SIU exercised its option to purchase the building through letters exchanged with the Cline in August of 1982, seeks a total of $1,144,238.93 in damages on two counts.

Cline informed University officials of a $1.6 million price tag on the property when a lease on the building was signed in September of 1981. Last April, the Illinois Capital Development Board offered Cline $675,000 for the property on behalf of SIU.

Cline is now seeking that difference plus damages for what is claimed to be unpaid rent on the building and damage to the structure.

A total of $196,994.93 in rent for about one year and seven months is also sought. After the University's $120,000 one-year lease on the property expired in September of 1982, the school maintained the building without further lease payments under Cline's permission.

In a letter sent from Clarence Dougherty, vice president for campus services, to Harry Melvin, Cline's son and legal representative at that time. Dougherty asked that the University be allowed to retain custody of the building under the lease arrangements "pending the determination of availability of funds for the purchase."

And although the funds were never released through the state Bureau of the Budget, the suit claims that through an appropriation made in 1982, the funds to purchase the building were available.

Housing board rules it can't hear complaint

By Phil Milano
Staff Writer

The Carbondale Fair Housing Board does not have jurisdiction over a discrimination complaint filed by a Carbondale woman, the board decided on Wednesday.

However, the board agreed to write a letter of referral to the proper state and federal authorities, requesting that they investigate the complaint.

Andrea Stephens, who filed the complaint with the board on Tuesday, said she would file a new one with the Division for the Enforcement of Civil and Equal Rights in the Attorney General's Office in Springfield on Thursday. The board said Stephens could also file a complaint with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The complaint claims Stephens was denied a chance to rent a trailer after the landlord, William Lipe, Route 7, Carbondale, discovered her male roommate was black.

Complainant to file with state

Board member Don Carlton said, "There probably isn't a question that there is a violation of Fair Housing Board rules, but we don't have any power to do something about it." If the board did have jurisdiction, an informal meeting between the parties involved would have been the next step in the process to resolve the matter.

The board does not have jurisdiction because the trailer involved is outside city limits, according to Pa. McMeen, assistant city attorney.

Stephens said her intention in filing the complaint was "to let him (Lipe) know that he can't discriminate against me because my boyfriend is black."

The trailer is located north of Glendale School on Route 7, and south of Carbondale Industrial Park. Although the school and park are located within city limits, the area between them is not.

The city is able to make zoning and subdivision laws for any area within 1.5 miles of city limits. Carbondale NAACP President Al Ross, who is assisting Stephens, argued that since the city gave Lipe the power to do business in the area where the trailer is located, it should be able to curtail that power.

McMeen said the 1.5 mile rule applied specifically to zoning and subdivision matters. She said Jackson County does not have a regulatory agency to deal with discrimination matters, so it would not be able to help.

The board voted to write referral letters to the Illinois Attorney General's Office and to HUD.

U.S. House OKs bill to make hiring illegal aliens unlawful

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, in an effort to discourage foreigners from crossing the borders of the United States in search of work, voted Wednesday to make it a crime to hire illegal aliens.

Anyone hiring three or more unlawful aliens would be violating the law. He would get a warning for a first offense and a fine for second offenses. The fines could go as high as $2,000 for each violation.

Under a Senate-passed bill, a person guilty of a "continued pattern of offenses" could go to jail for six months.

Opponents urged rejection, arguing it would lead to discrimination against all Hispanics in this country, whether here legally or not.

But the House voted 304-120 to reject an alternative offered by the chamber's Hispanic bloc, which called for increasing enforcement of existing labor laws to discourage exploiting illegal immigrant labor.

Penalties for hiring illegal aliens are the enforcement heart of a bill designed to curtail the flow of millions of unlawful immigrants.

Another key element would allow illegal aliens who have lived in the United States since 1982 to stay legally and ultimately apply for citizenship if they can show they have jobs, good moral character and good health and are unlikely to become wards of the state.

The Senate bill carries a similar if less lenient amnesty. Differences will be ironed out after the House acts on the bill.

Sponsors of the House's immigration control bill scoffed at the Hispanic bloc's plan and said it was intended to scuttle their effort to stem the influx of workers over U.S. borders.

"If this amendment is adopted, the bill is killed," said Rep. Romano L. Mazzoli, D-Ky. "It is dead in the water; it goes nowhere."

The amendment was offered by Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif..

Eleven appointed to USO staff

By David Liss
Staff Writer

Eleven staff members, including six new commissioners, have been appointed to the executive branch of the Undergraduate Student Organization by President Andy Leighton.

Caroline Dwan will head the Academic Affairs Commission starting in the fall semester.

Nicole Glasser, former vice president of the Triad Executive Council, will head the commission until then.

East side Sen. Charmaine Harris will head the Minority Affairs Commission starting in the fall. West side Sen. Nina Keith will head the commission until then. Steve Rosengarden heads the Housing, Tuition and Fees Commission.

Thompson Point Senator

Susan Disselhorst heads the Student Welfare Commission. Mark Styningner, previously the president of Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity, will head the City Affairs Commission starting in the fall. Micheal Majchrowitz, an independent senator, is acting commissioner until then.

Twisters, floods hit Midwest as heat wave blisters Northeast

By the Associated Press

Tornadoes and flash floods renewed an assault on the Midwest on Wednesday, wrecking homes and swamping cars, as a deadly heat wave returned to the Northeast and a tropical depression headed to Florida.

Two elderly people drowned when their car was swept away by floodwaters from 8-inch rains near Lincoln, Neb., bringing the toll of weather-related deaths since the weekend to 17, including 13 who died in a heat wave in the Northeast and two killed by a tornado in South Dakota.

As the mercury climbed back into the high numbers in the East after a one-day break, about 200 elementary students were overcome by heat exhaustion at a school in Mullica Township in southern New Jersey and a prison inmate died of heat stroke in Pennsylvania. About 70 of the students were treated at two hospitals, but only two were admitted.

Temperatures hit a record 96 in Atlantic City, N.J., prompting early dismissals at several nearby schools, including Pennsauken High School where in recent days a few male students had taken to wearing miniskirts to get around a dress code that prohibits shorts.

Records for the date also were broken or tied in Boston, 97; Hartford, Conn., 96, and Scranton, Pa., 92. It was 94 in New York City and 97 in Washington and Richmond, Va. Meanwhile, a tropical depression with 30-mph winds - a potential hurricane - moved inland at St. Augustine, Fla., during the morning.

At Citronelle, Ala. a bolt of lightning struck an oil tank farm Tuesday night, sparking a spectacular blast and fire that destroyed seven tanks holding 1,500 gallons of petroleum products each.

Violent thunderstorms hit for a second straight day from eastern Colorado to Michigan.

In Lincoln, Neb., where 8 inches of rain fell in 24 hours, police said there were dozens of reports of people in cars and houses trapped by high water, and cars swept off roads.

A Nebraska State Patrol helicopter rescued three people from a farm near Friend after boats could not negotiate the swift water from overflowing Turkey Creek. Five people were injured in south-central Nebraska on Tuesday night when a tornado leveled four farmhouses near Bruning. The town was sealed off by authorities because of the danger caused by downed power lines in standing water, officials said.

bondale Cleanup day, will head the Public Relations Commission.

David Strong, Leighton's campaign secretary-treasurer, is chief of staff. Micheal Zurek, former Trojan party supporter, is the assistant chief of staff.

Perry Lewin is the communications coordinator. Michael Spires, who finished third in the presidential race as a write-in candidate, is the executive assistant.

Mary Coffey, Action Party chairwoman, is acting administrative assistant.

Leighton said that he hopes to appoint at least 10 students to each commission.

"The emphasis is on recruitment," said Leighton. Several meetings are scheduled, he said, where he will enter classes to recruit students or the commissions. Students who have majors or degrees in areas useful to a particular commission will have a chance to apply their learning, he said, but "there is something for everyone."

Recruitment is already taking place, said Leighton, and a framework is being put together for the "top priority" voter registration drive. The drive is planned for the fall, he said, and will include an issues rally, tentatively scheduled for October.

"The King March in Chicago had 700 special interest groups represented," said Leighton. "We want at least 17 special interests to share a platform." The goal of the rally would be to inform students of the issues, he said, and to give them a reason to vote.

"We're also hoping to work with the Student Programming Council to bring in movies that deal with issues," said Leighton. He mentioned movies such as "Fail Safe" and "China Syndrome," both of which deal with nuclear holocaust.

Leighton said that as the USO updates the SIUC Student Directory students will be asked if they are registered to vote.

"This way we can at least see who is registered," he said. If the budget allows, he explained, the data could be broken down demographically and registration information could be provided for unregistered students.

An attempt will be made to improve voter turnout in student government elections as well, according to Leighton. "You had to be determined to vote," said Leighton of last spring's elections. "You had to go out of your way." Leighton said he hopes to provide more voting locations for the next student elections.

"There's a lot of apathy due to lack of leadership," said Leighton. He said that last year the "parties weren't vocal enough."

The new USO will stress cooperation over partisanship among its 16 Action, 17 Trojan and three independent senators, said Leighton.

"We're trying to build unity, not partisanship," he said.

Storm forces DC-9 crash landing

RCMULUS, Mich. (AP) - A USAir DC-9 jet crash-landed on a runway at Detroit Metropolitan Airport on Wednesday as the pilot tried to abort a landing in a severe thunderstorm, and five of the 55 people aboard suffered minor injuries, an airline spokesman said.

A gust of wind apparently forced the plane onto the runway as the pilot was retracting the landing gear to make another pass at the airport, said David Shipley, USAir assistant vice president for public affairs in Washington, D.C.

Legislation might aid ailing bank

SPRINGFIELD (AP) - The Illinois Senate gave preliminary approval to legislation that would help the ailing Continental Illinois National Bank by allowing it to merge with an out-of-state institution.

Without debate, the Senate approved amendments that would loosen state law so Continental could be bought by an out-of-state bank, should that become necessary. Under current state law, Continental could only merge with an Illinois or foreign bank.

The amended bill is expected to be put to a final vote Thursday, and does not appear to have significant opposition in the Senate.

Greyford deliberations to resume

CHICAGO (AP) - A federal jury will resume negotiations Thursday morning in the case of a suspended Cook County judge charged with accepting thousands of dollars in bribes for favorable rulings in the nation's largest court system.

The six-man, six-woman federal jury, which began deliberations Wednesday morning in the case of John Murphy, the first judge to be tried in the Operation Greyford investigation of corruption in the courts, recessed about 7 p.m. without reaching a verdict.

Renowned architect dies at 81

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) - Nathaniel Alexander Owings, a renowned architect and engineer who designed Chicago's John Hancock Center and the Chase Manhattan Bank in New York, died Wednesday at age 81.

Owings died at his home in Jacona, north of Santa Fe. Owings, who in 1936 co-founded the architectural and engineering firm of Skidmore, Owings and Merrill, also designed the reflecting basin in front of the U.S. Capitol and the Oakland, Calif., Coliseum.

Owings' other private commissions included the Union Carbide Building and the Lever House in New York.

Senate defeats GI education benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, after some fast parliamentary footwork by Republican leaders and Vice President George Bush, reversed itself on Wednesday night and defeated 47-45 a peacetime revival of GI Bill education benefits for military men and women.

Earlier in the evening, the GOP-dominated Senate approved the program 51-46 in a test vote during the often-bitter debate, including one Republican's suggestion that Budget Director David Stockman had deliberately avoided service during the Vietnam years. A Stockman aide declined to reply.

The measure would have entitled both current and future soldiers to $10,800 or more when they leave the service to attend colleges or technical schools.

The preliminary victory sent Majority Leader Howard Baker Jr. and Armed Services Chairman John Tower, R-Texas, scrambling to reverse the outcome on technical grounds. Though President Reagan once promised to ask Congress to revive the GI Bill, terminated in 1976, the administration strongly opposed the measure, sponsored by Republican Sens. William Armstrong of Colorado, William Cohen of Maine, and many others.

As Bush was rushed to the chamber to preside — and cast tie-breaking votes, if necessary — Baker and other GOP leaders changed enough votes to prevail on a series of procedural challenges, including a ruling by Bush that Armstrong's original bill was "out of order." That forced the Colorado senator to start the debate anew with a second draft.

The final, two-vote defeat came on Tower's motion to table — kill — Armstrong's second version. "They finally got us by a vote or two," conceded the Coloradan, who had pushed the measure for the last five years. "But we'll be back again."

After that 7.5-hour struggle, the Senate swiftly approved, 72-20, a far more modest proposal, sponsored by Ohio Democrat John Glenn, which would provide educational benefits to a limited number of new recruits — and then only if they agree to a $250-per-month cut in pay for two years of active service.

Glenn's measure, as amended by Tower, would be a four-year experiment limited to just 12,500 recruits each of those years. They would receive $500 per month for 36 months — four academic years — of college after completing their tours.

Opponents decried the more sweeping Armstrong proposal as costly and unnecessary at a time when all the services are enjoying banner recruiting years, and suggested it was designed more to win votes in November than to enhance the nation's military posture.

New recruits would have been offered up to $300 per month in future education benefits for up to 36 months of service. Those who agreed to serve in highly specialized or hardship positions — such as Army combat teams — could qualify for three times that amount. Men and women with at least 10 years service could qualify for up to $18,000 in education benefits, though one-third of that amount would be deducted from their pay.

Commission bemoans area economic evaluation

By Jim Ludeman
Staff Writer

The Greater Egypt Regional Planning and Development Commission, a commission made up of elected representatives from Jackson, Perry, Williamson, Jefferson and Franklin counties, is not too happy with the way the state of Illinois has described their area.

The Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs recently released a five year economic development strategy.

According to Ike Kirkikis, executive director of the Greater Egypt Commission, the problem is that the DCCA report on Southern Illinois says nothing positive about the area.

"There is no identification of assets that can be built on," he said. "If I were an investor, and I had to go by the report, I sure wouldn't invest in Southern Illinois."

Kirkikis said he had no arguments with what the state is trying to do, but there were no assets to be found in the report on Southern Illinois. Kirkikis attributed this mainly to a lack of information on the part of the DCCA. "GERPDC would like to work with the DCCA to improve the emphasis of the report and provide the necessary information, he said.

Some of the assets of the region, Kirkikis said, are Southern Illinois University, which he described as a "major research institution," and the mining industry, which Kirkikis said produces about 45 percent of the state's coal.

The primary goals of the DCCA plan are to promote economic growth and unemployment reduction, at rates superior to national rates. One way it intends to do this is by formulating "component areas" based on common economic traits and geographic proximity of the involved counties.

Convention center alive, still not well

IT COULD be called The Project That Wouldn't Die.

In 1973, a group of Carbondale businessmen, concerned about revitalizing the downtown area, proposed a building project involving a hotel-conference center.

The project was to be a joint effort by city officials, the Chamber of Commerce and private local investors to buy property on the corner of Walnut and South Illinois streets, tear down the existing buildings and put up a convention center, a parking garage, and a hotel on the location.

Eleven years and many arguments, much maneuvering and very little progress later, the project is still alive. However, the focus of attention on the project has become far removed from the original plan.

NOW, THE convention center project is caught up in a quagmire of grant, bond, and guarantee hassles. A set of bonds to finance the project had been issued in 1981, guaranteed by the Farmer's Home Administration (FmHA), but they became unuseable because of the many delays in the project.

A second set of bonds is due to be issued, but now there is the problem of who will guarantee these. FmHA no longer guarantees such bonds. However, there is a possibility that the agency might transfer its original guarantee to the new set of bonds.

Stan Hoyer, owner of the Carbondale Holiday Inn and the driving force behind the convention center project, presented an alternative plan last month, in which the city of Carbondale would guarantee the entire amount of the bonds, through its taxing authority.

THIS PLAN is unacceptable to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, which has given the city a $2 million land acquisition grant for the project, with the understanding, HUD says, that private investors would be sharing in the risk for the project. Hoyer's plan would leave the city with the risk. City officials and taxpayers ought to be concerned about that, too.

At this time, though, both Hoyer and the city are agreed on what needs to be done. They and U.S. Rep. Paul Simon are scheduled to meet with FmHA and HUD officials Thursday in Washington to discuss the possible FmHA guarantee of the loan and the retention of the HUD grant. City Manager Bill Dixon calls this meeting "pivotal," because it is the first time that everyone involved with the project will be able to sit face-to-face to discuss the situation.

IF THE two agencies can be convinced that their help would not be for nothing, then the convention center project can finally get rolling. If not, Hoyer and the city are back where they started.

The convention center project was intended to be a joint venture between city and private investors. If it is successful, it will show what cooperation between the city and business community and determination on both sides can accomplish. If it fails, it could mean the unfortunate end of city-business cooperation.

Both sides have much to lose and much to gain in this project. For that reason, if nothing else, let's hope that the project that wouldn't die continues to live.

Reagan doesn't extend his charity to entire country

RONALD REAGAN'S Mother's Day visit to a home for the elderly poor was in keeping with his personal attentiveness to society's forgotten. Few modern presidents have been as personally involved with charitable groups as Reagan. He is comfortable in his involvements, whether it is over a meal with the old folks at a Little Sisters of the Poor home or among children in an inner-city classroom.

One on one, he's all heart. When it's one on 200, or one on two million, the impersonal takes over and the charitable pulsebeat stops. The most striking example of this deadness is Reagan's current effort to monkey with, and perhaps severely damage, the Combined Federal Campaign, the federal government's philanthropic payroll-deduction program.

THIS IS no small mother lode. Workplace donations from federal employees totaled $109

Colman McCarthy
Washington Post Writers Group

million in 1983, a jump of 9 percent over 1982. The Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) is the nation's largest charity drive.

Instead of celebrating the new signs of increased generosity, the Reagan administration, through the Office of Personnel Management, is straining to hurt millions of citizens who depend on charities funded through the CFC. In mid-April, OPM proposed regulations that would limit choices federal employees have to direct their money to specific charities. Brochures describing the fund's charities would not be allowed nor would prospective donors be provided a list of eligible groups.

LAST YEAR, more charities were described in the brochures. That partly explains the 9 percent increase in donations. People knew where their money was going and which groups were out there, especially the smaller charities with low promotional budgets. Interest was stirred. Donald J. Devine of OPM defends his proposed regulation by arguing that federal employees will still be able to write in the name of any charity they want to support. At hearings before the Government Operations Subcommittee, Devine presented himself as Mister Generosity and feigned shock that anyone would think otherwise.

It was a boorish play. Few in the hearing room - and least of all the subcommittee chairman, Rep. Barney Frank (D-Mass.) - were unaware that the latest proposal was another attack on groups that the Reagan administration would prefer, putting it charitably, to destroy. Last year, Reagan tried the easy way: signing an executive order that excluded from the CFC any charity that engaged in "advocacy, lobbying or litigation."

THIS WAS part of the right-wing crusade to "defund the left." Except its aim, as usual, was off. Groups like Save the Children, the American Kidney Fund and the American Foundation for the Blind would now also lose out. This politicizing of charity went nowhere in the courts, which further convinces the right that the world is against it. First a U.S. district court ruled that Reagan's order violated the Constitution by limiting charities' rights to free speech.

The administration appealed the decision. It lost again.

AT THE hearings, Devine took shelter in evasiveness, distortions and witlessness. Barney Frank, who had just heard from spokespeople for dozens of charities who opposed the new rules, forced Devine to concede that the OPM regulations would likely lead to a decrease in contributions. One estimate of the loss is $30 million.

This needless assault on the CFC means that the poor, the handicapped and the powerless are doubly vulnerable from the Reagan administration. It first cuts their social programs and then tries for second cuts by regulations overwhelmingly opposed by the charities it is claiming to help.

Face-to-face with people who hurt, Reagan would be too kindly and fairminded to try this. Removed from the pain, he is an ideologue who will try anything.

Letters

Anti-abortionists part of assault on freedom

ROSE MARIE Nowaki's letter (DE, May 9) connecting the issue of abortion with that of birth control should effectively lay to rest the myth that the anti-abortion movement is a "single issue" group.

The movement is a component of an overall attempt on the part of the Catholic hierarchy, its followers, and fundamentalist Christians to eliminate present constitutional freedoms and enforce compliance with Judeo-Christian principles through the establishment of a de facto Christian theocracy.

SUCH A state might appear benign in its de facto stage; however, as it proceeded to a de jure state, it is quite likely that it would equal the fundamentalist Moslem state under the AYATOLLAH KHOMENEI IN ITS EXCESSES.

Nowaki mentioned that, prior to 1930, all the Christian churches condemned the use of contraceptives; however, she failed to mention that, for many decades, both federal and state governments sought to deny their access to the public through various laws.

Dissemination of birth control information was banned as being "obscene" under provisions of the anti-pornography Comstock Laws.

THE LAWS were named after their sponsor, Anthony Comstock, then secretary of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, a man whose accomplishments in his first eight years with this organization included compiling a dossier of over 976,000 names and addresses of persons on mailing lists for pornography. Feminist Margaret Sanger, who opened an illegal birth control clinic in 1915 and disseminated birth control information in her paper, The Woman Rebel, was arraigned for violating the Comstock Laws, and fled to Europe to avoid prosecution.

On the state level, laws ranged from outright bans to harassment of those seeking contraceptives. It was not until 1966 that the last of these state laws was revoked.

THE JUDEO-CHRISTIAN philosophy is anti-sexual in that it advocates abstinence except for the purpose of procreation. The Bible is sexist in that a woman who concludes, and have a membership willing to support its conclusions. While less than 30 percent of the population supports pornography, thus making it an attractive target, the danger is that the results of such a commission may well be used to make sex education in public schools reflect narrow, archaic Christian values, and even interfere with academic freedom in the study of sexuality in institutions of gives up her virginity voluntarily is subject to being stoned to death; yet there is no punishment for a man who takes a woman prior to marriage. The Bible further demeans women by condemning neither rape or abuse of women. While the taking of a woman by force is mentioned in Deuteronomy 22, verses 22-29, it is only concerned with virgins; and in the case of a man who rapes an unpossessed virgin, it sets his punishment as taking her in marriage, and paying her father 50 shekels of silver (about $75).

Some Christians might argue that the New Testament changes women's status; however, I Peter, Chapter III, verses 1-6, demands women be in "subjugation" to their husbands, "Even as Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him lord," and in verse 7 describes them as being "weaker vessels."

THE RECENTLY announced intent to create a Presidential Commission on Pornography is a move by the Reagan Administration to move ahead toward a de facto theocracy. Like Reagan's Commission on Hunger, it will be formed with a set of preconceived higher learning.

While the preconceived results may draw plaudits from some feminists, their support of this effort at censorship will be tragic as women's rights will be crushed under a theocratic state.

THE VIEW that a theocracy under Christians under the Ayatollah Khomeini in its excesses, alarmist in nature. The excesses in Iran pale when compared to the use of the wheel and rack as instruments of torture in the Catholic Inquisition, and the smell of bodies burning at the stake under both Catholic and Puritan rule. It must be remembered there are many pagans, such as myself, some of whom practice witchcraft - both Black and White. And the Bible does say, "thou shalt suffer no witch to live."

Freedom has always seemed to be a fragile and almost ephemeral thing. It has been one of history's tragedies that so often it has been allowed by humans to slip away, almost unnoticed until it is finally gone. - Robert T. Phillips, Carbondale

Barber seeks World's Fair curios — from 1893

CHICAGO (AP) — While politicians haggle about the particulars of the city's 1992 World's Fair and who's going to foot the bill, a Southwest Side barber is trying to find a Chicago World's Fair guard's uniform — from 1893.

"I have parts of two uniforms, but I lack a pair of pants and a cap," says Russell Riberto.

Riberto, 62, is a member of the World's Fair Collectors Society, which he says has about 1,000 members nationwide.

"Each of us collects different fairs," he said. "I specialize in 1893. But items from the 1893 fair are extremely rare."

Riberto started his hobby about 20 years ago when the Beatles and long hair became popular and his barber-shop business fell off.

Now his collection fills the basement and a couple of rooms in his suburban Evergreen Park home, plus some nearby garages he rents. He does sell some items, because "my wife keeps yelling at me to get rid of the stuff."

Riberto finds things he wants by advertising in antique magazines and traveling. Society members also have their own grapevine.

"A lot of these items you can't get from people on the street," he says. "They think an item is worth a million dollars. They don't know it has a limited value. But we know how much an item is worth to another collector."

Riberto's 1893 World's Fair collection includes a badge, a sword and a coat from a guard's uniform.

"The coat doesn't have a moth hole in it," he says. "It could be worn tomorrow. It's beautiful."

Riberto is willing to pay "a couple of hundred dollars each" for a cap and a pair of pants from the 1893 fair. An amateur historian, he says he'll be able to authenticate the items.

When Riberto talks about the 1893 fair, he sounds as if he had actually been there.

In April 1979, Riberto arranged for an 1893-style wedding of two fellow collectors — now Mr. and Mrs. Tom Diddies of Boynton Beach, Fla. — on the site of the 1893 World's Fair in Jackson Park on Chicago's South Side.

The bride and groom wore wedding apparel from that era and arrived by gondolas — which Riberto says were used extensively at the 1893 fair. The ceremony was performed on the front steps of the Museum of Science and Industry, which was built for the 1893 fair.

The Chicago City Council has been debating whether to hold the 1992 fair on the lakefront or farther south.

Wellness, Women's centers cited

The Wellness Center and the Women's Center of Carbondale have been recognized for "outstanding contributions to community health."

The Jackson County Community Mental Health Center cited the two groups during an awards dinner at Touch of Nature. The Women's Center was cited for its provision of shelter, counseling and services to those suffering from family abuse or sexual assault.

The Wellness Center was recognized for its "promotion of holistic health values, lifestyle and non-alcoholic good times, and its outreach initiatives for preventive self-care."

Hugh Muldon of the Mental Health Center said the awards were given "to highlight positive human service contributions to our community's well being."

"Too often," he said, "the work of dedicated staff and volunteers goes unrecognized and is taken for granted in their own community."

Museum sets MFA exhibit of sculptures

The MFA thesis exhibit of Bob Smith, who started graduate school at SIU-C in 1982, will be on display in the University Museum's Mitchell Gallery in Quigley Hall Friday through June 22.

An opening reception will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday.

Smith's exhibit consists of sculptures made from a variety of materials such as clay, styrofoam, asphalt, wood and paint.

Smith received his bachelor of art in education degree at the University of Mississippi in 1980. He taught for two years in Sardis, Miss., as an art instructor for gifted and talented students.

The University Museum is open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday, when SIU-C classes are in session.

Textiles exhibit set at museum

The Masters of Fine Arts exhibit of Jean L. Price, including work in textiles, acrylic paints, paint sticks and canvas, will be in the University Museum in Paner Hall beginning Friday and running through June 24.

An opening reception is scheduled for Friday from 6 to 8 p.m.

One of Price's works, an installation piece titled "Celebration Triptych," allows the viewer to see the work as a whole or wander through it to enjoy the detail of the layers.

University Museum hours are from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. on Sunday.

Blind woman rides bicycle across U.S. for disease cure

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP) — Diabetes took most of Maureen Mould's sight five years ago. But with the help of her husband and daughter, the South Bend, Ind., native is biking 3,000 miles this summer to Seattle to help raise money to fight the disease. Maureen, her husband, Eric, and their 5-year-old daughter, Cara, left South Bend June 2 and arrived here Monday. They have targeted Chillicothe, Mo., as their next major stop. The trio has encountered few problems so far. They are averaging about 50 miles per day on a custom-made "bicycle built for three" that cost about $5,000, most of which was raised by sponsors' donations. "As a matter of fact, it's almost been too easy," Eric said. "We lost a bolt in the first 10 miles, but other than that everything has been great."

Cara is doing her share of the work, according to her parents.

"The biggest problem we have with her is keeping her attention," Maureen said. "You know how kids' thoughts wander."

"All we have to do though is tell her to pedal and she'll do it. As a matter of fact, at the end of the day she's in a lot better shape than we are," she said.

The Moulds' journey, called the "Beta Ride for Diabetes," has been underwritten by more than a half-dozen corporations.

'Busters' nutty, spine-tingling

By Joe Walter
Staff Writer

Ghosts beware. Beware because the "Ghostbusters" are in town. Bill Murray and Dan Aykroyd, together for the first time since "Saturday Night Live," team with Harold Ramis ("Second City TV") to form one of the funniest team of ghost chasers ever.

These three are joined by producer-director Ivan Reitman, who also directed the offbeat comedies "Meatballs" and "Stripes."

Together these talents create a frantic, nutty, high-budget, high-tech comedy about three university faculty members who investigate supernatural and parapsychological phenomena until they lose their funding.

Their income source gone, they start a business of trapping ghosts using "proton beam rods."

Their first customer is a hotel menaced by a ghoul that loves to eat. Next comes Dana Barrett (Sigourney Weaver), whose apartment is infested with all sorts of unfriendly spiritual entities, like the vicious "Hell Dog." Later, the three work to save New York City as a biblical prophecy is about to be fulfilled.

A Film Review

"Ghostbusters" does not rely on old comic book movie clichés, with scared looks and double takes, that have become associated with such comic greats as Laurel and Hardy, Abbott and Costello, Bob Hope and Martin and Lewis. Instead, it has aggressive, zonked-out characters who remain calm, for the most part, to the most offbeat supernatural situations—even demonic possessions. Here, the spirits are used as the straight men to Murray, Aykroyd and Ramis.

The main characters work well together. Murray does the talking, Aykroyd does the hysterics and Ramis provides the careful rationalization—making the team and the comedy work well. The characterization helps the film keep a good, fast pace without getting too tiring. "Ghostbusters" features some superb special effects featuring giant models like the "Hell Dog," "Spud Ghost" and the comical "Stay-Puffed Marshmallow Man," animated ghosts and the rolling cloud effect that was used in "Close Encounters of the Third Kind."

members on the trail of the supernatural in the movie 'Ghostbusters.'

This film also proves that Bill Murray always plays the same type of character in movies. There is little difference between the Bill Murray character in "Ghostbusters" and the characters he played in "Stripes" or "Meatballs." On the other hand, Ramis and Aykroyd show how versatile they are by their performances in the film. Sigourney Weaver ("Alien," "The Year of Living Dangerously") and Rick Moranis ("Second City TV," "Strange Brew") provide good supporting roles as the two apartment dwellers who become possessed and bring mass mayhem to The Big Apple.

The soundtrack also is excellent, with such artists as Laura Branigan, The Busboys and Ray Parker Jr. performing.

With its spine chilling suspense and its cool one-liners, "Ghostbusters" is a good way to beat the summer heat.

U of I graduate student finds lost South American culture

CHICAGO (AP) - Hundreds of years before Pompeii vanished in the shadow of Mount Vesuvius, a series of similar volcanic disasters in the Andes Mountains snuffed out the New World's most promising civilization, recent findings indicate.

Archaeologists had long known of the existence of a highly sophisticated art style originating from a region of the northwestern Andes stretching some 550 miles from northern Ecuador into Colombia.

But it wasn't until a graduate student unearthed shards of pottery from beneath the volcanic ash at the Nueva Era Site near Quito, Ecuador, that a team of scientists was willing to backdate similar artifacts in the Field Museum's collection from 400-800 A.D. to 600-1500 B.C.

Behind that supposition lies a trail of missed connections and a detective story stretching back 100 years that, if correct, suggests the empires of the Incas, Aztecs and Mayans may be traced back to people who fled the Cauca Valley to escape the continuing eruptions.

"We know this (civilization) wasn't a group of 50 chasing mastodons," said Dr. Donald Lathrap, professor of archaeology at the University of Illinois. "We're looking, at first glance anyway, at something approaching what we'd call a state."

Baptist Center set to open, but unfilled

By Cathy Brown
Staff Writer

Nearly a year after the Illinois Department of Corrections considered purchasing the Baptist Student Center to house prisoners, the center will once again open its doors as a student dormitory.

The center was closed in May 1983 because it was becoming too expensive to operate for the Illinois Baptist State Association. The IBSA will reopen the center this fall under new director Douglas Horner.

Horner arrived June 4 to manage the center, an off-campus, University-approved living center located on Campus Drive. "We are not going to fail," said Horner. He said this is in spite of the fact that the center now has less than half of the housing contracts needed to break even.

Horner said that he hopes to get at least 180 of the 296 living spaces filled this fall. At this point he has filled only 60.

However, he is confident. "I've laid my career on the line to come here," he said. "I don't go anywhere to fail. We're gonna build it up. They're gonna love it here."

Horner is advertising, writing letters and phoning people in an attempt to recruit more residents. He hopes to attract people by emphasizing that in spite of the center's name, people from all denominations are welcome to live there.

going to fail'*

Only about 25 percent of past residents were Baptist, and in recent years many have been Muslims, he said.

He stressed the fact that the center will not try to restrict a student's right to choose his own beliefs. "Christianity isn't beating people over the head with a Bible. Part of it is respecting the rights of other people," he said.

Horner said that they will probably offer some religious services, but attendance would be voluntary.

The rules at the center are basically the same as those in on-campus housing, except that men and women have separate living quarters and restricted visiting hours with each other. He said separate quarters are necessary because the center has common shower and bathroom facilities.

"As far as saying 'Thou shalt not do this...,' I'm not gonna do that," he said. "The main thing is that I expect you as a student to act like an adult, be clean-cut and considerate."

Horner said that his plans for the next year include the possibility of opening a Christian bookstore in the building, and opening the center's cafeteria for public use.

Horner, 44, has four degrees, including a doctorate in educational administration from SIUC. He has worked in the Southern Illinois area in the past as a school teacher and guidance counselor. Most recently he was Dean of Business Affairs at Hannibal-LaGrange Baptist College in Bolivar, Mo.

Horner said that the recent controversy over the IBSA selling the center to the DOC for a prison was overblown. When the IBSA considered selling the center, several groups contacted them. When the DOC approached the IBSC, the news got to the media and people became upset, Horner said.

However, he said, "No one ever made a decision to sell it and the IBSA was never made an offer."

Trip to see Bob Hope set for July

The John A. Logan College Foundation will offer a bus trip to the performance of Bob Hope July 7 at the Muny Opera Starfest '84 in St. Louis.

The cost of the trip is $33.50, which includes a ticket for the performance and transportation.

Departure times and locations will be: John A. Logan College parking lot, 3 p.m.; west side of Penney's at the University Mall, 3:10 p.m.; Hardee's in Murphysboro, 3:20 p.m.; and Dixie's Cafe in Pinckneyville, 3:50 p.m. A dinner stop is planned at Laclede's Landing on the St. Louis waterfront. Passengers will have their choice of restaurants. Hope's performance will begin at 8:15 p.m.

Reservations are confirmed when payment is received at the foundation office. Refunds will be given only if the performance is cancelled by the Muny Opera prior to departure.

All trips are open to the public.

Persons who wish to register for the trip may contact the John A. Logan College Foundation at 985-3741, 549-7335, 542-9512, or 937-3438, extension 355.

Howard N. Rosen, inventor of the pressure steam wood dryer.

New lumber drying process invented at SIU-C laboratory

By E.J. Rotert
Staff Writer

Lumber isn't always a popular topic, but at the U.S. Agriculture Department's Forestry Science Laboratory at SIU-C and the STC-Carterville campus it's talked about quite a bit.

The laboratory's succeeded in putting a new twist on the old process of lumber drying. That new twist, according to Howard N. Rosen, supervisory chemical engineer at the laboratory and main inventor of the process, is drying lumber with steam pressure.

Although Rosen admits the process hasn't showed much commercial appeal yet he's expecting that to change sometime in the future.

"I'm hoping within the next five years someone will try it," he said. "I try to be optimistic."

Rosen said the conventional process, which has been used commercially since World War II, relies on adding heated air to the lumber drying shed. Through this method, he said, the water in the wood evaporates and is vented into the atmosphere. Because of this venting process the conventional method results in high energy and heat losses for industry currently using it.

Rosen said that the laboratory's new patented process, if used commercially, would cut energy use by 20 percent and dry wood five to 16 times faster.

"The process is more expensive than conventional methods, but the increased production compensates for the added cost," he said.

Rosen's new invention - the pressure steam dryer - is really a pressure cooker that accents the process currently used in drying sheds. By removing air from the shed's drying chamber, he said, the pressure inside is boosted to 2.5 times atmospheric pressure. A bypass line on the steam dryer recirculates waste steam through the shed to keep the temperature at a constant 300 degrees Fahrenheit. Rosen said that conventional drying sheds can only go to about 180 degrees Fahrenheit.

Rosen said that both the added pressure and the constant even distribution of steam in the drying chamber shorten the drying time of wood and improve its quality.

Rosen said that all the laboratory has dried so far is wood for furniture. But soon, he said, they intend to dry railroad ties, which by conventional methods can take a year to reach 50 percent saturation. Rosen thinks that with the new process they can be dried in less than a week.

Because of pressure increases on the sheds by the new system, Rosen said, they must be refitted with thicker walls and better building materials. He said the prototype, which is located at the STC-Carterville campus, cost around $70,000 to build.

Rosen said the laboratory received $200,000 in grant money from the U.S. Department of Energy in 1980 to study methods of using waste heat for wood drying. $115,000 of that was used at SIU-C - some to further study the system but most to couple the new steam dryer with a conventional kiln.

Rosen said the remaining $85,000 was split between seven other universities to also study the system: Oregon State, Idaho State, University of Missouri-Columbia, Purdue University, University of Alabama, Virginia Tech, and Mississippi State University.

Rosen said the project has already spawned five master's theses and one doctorate thesis at the universities.

Rosen said the system could have a few drawbacks. He said one problem could be corrosion problems of the drying shed's metal because of the higher pressures. He said testing for metal corrosion was lax because of the high cost of building the prototype.

Rosen said that one reason he believes the pressure steam dryer hasn't appeared attractive yet is because the last three years have been poor for the wood industry.

New drug may prove effective herpes treatment

BOSTON (AP) - Researchers say a new drug provides the first effective treatment for repeated flareups of genital herpes, largely eliminating the rash and pain that are the chief misery of this common disease.

The drug does not cure herpes, and its long-term safety must still be tested. But for those who have taken it, the medicine "has made an enormous impact on the quality of their lives," said Dr. Stephen E. Straus, a government scientist.

The medicine, a capsule form of the drug acyclovir, is considered experimental and is not available for routine use. Herpes is so widespread, however, that once approved, this drug could become one of the most widely prescribed medicines in the United States.

Besides helping those who already have the disease, researchers hope that acyclovir capsules may someday be used to keep people from catching the sexually transmitted herpes virus.

Acyclovir is already on the market as a prescription ointment sold under the brand name Zovirax. The ointment helps speed healing of the first outbreak of infection, but is worthless against recurring outbreaks of the painful rash and sores. Earlier research has shown that the capsules also hasten healing if people take them after symptoms appear.

Burroughs Wellcome, which makes acyclovir, has asked the Food and Drug Administration to approve the capsules for prescription sales.

"We expect to hear from the FDA in the next couple of months," said company spokeswoman Dulcie Straughan.

No one knows precisely how many people have genital herpes, but it's estimated that there are 10 million to 20 million victims in the United States.

Two studies on use of the new medicine to suppress herpes were published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine. Even though they found that the capsules eliminated or greatly reduced the frequency of the flareups, no one was cured. When the virus isn't causing a rash, it lies dormant in the victim's nerve roots. All the patients studied soon started having the rash again when they were taken off the drug.

In the studies, people took the capsules two to five times daily for four months. All had been plagued by frequent episodes of rash that typically occurred at least once a month.

In a study directed by Straus at the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, doctors gave 35 courses of the drug to 31 people. They had new rashes during only six of these treatment courses, or 17 percent.

A separate study, directed by Dr. John M. Douglas of the University of Washington, tested the medicine on 143 herpes sufferers. It completely prevented recurrences in 68 percent and greatly reduced them in the others.

"Oral acyclovir is the first therapeutic agent to have a clear suppressive effect on the rate of recurrences of genital herpes," these researchers concluded.

Bone Gap has its own museum, thanks to farm boy's curiosity

BONE GAP (AP) — What began as boyhood searches for arrowheads on a family farm has turned into the Indian Hill Museum — N.R. Reid's 100,000-piece collection of articles dating from 1250 B.C. to the 20th century.

For 43 years, Reid has collected items from the past. He began as a boy on his family's 200-acre farm, which had one of the largest Indian mounds in the area.

"My dad thought I was silly," the southeastern Illinois farmer recalled. "I used to go to town or to a neighbor to work. I'd see an old gun and ask what it could take to buy it. Often, the work I would do would pay for the guns."

Through the years, Reid's collection filled his home and basement to the point that there was only a path in the basement for walking.

In 1982 he decided to build a museum for his treasures. Last July, the museum opened. To date, more than 5,000 people have visited it.

The items on display are varied, but the biggest collections are Reid's $250,000 array of 300 guns and his 10,000 Indian artifacts. The latter include an arrowhead radiocarbon-dated to 1250 B.C.

"I had the museum in mind for years," Reid said. "I wanted to display, show and teach the children."

There is no admission fee, but donations are accepted.

"People look at the display and say they don't believe it," he said. "My wife and I travel, and we've not seen anything that equals this."

"I have to admit I've done something I'm awfully proud of," he added. "This is here forever for the education of our children today and tomorrow."

"Kids are interested in the past if you give them the chance. They'll go home with a better idea of the past and get their head going in the right direction."

Many of the museum's items have been loaned by area residents or bought by Reid. Everything in the collection is cataloged.

Haitian restraint in handling riots seen as a change

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The government reacted with restraint in dealing with recent rioting that hit at least six cities, a change from its traditionally brutal repression of dissent, Haitian and U.S. officials say.

The disturbances were apparently spontaneous, mainly stemming from food shortages. There were reports of as many as five deaths, but the government contended that no one was killed.

No government official claimed that the incidents were organized; Haiti's few widely known dissidents have been harassed and unable to build significant followings.

Some Haitian and U.S. officials theorized that the protests stemmed from Haitians' belief that President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier's repeated promises of "democracy and liberalization" mean freedom to express themselves about such persistent problems as hunger, police brutality and corruption.

A Haitian official, who spoke on condition that he not be named, said there is a struggle within the government between officials left over from the 14-year iron-hand rule of Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier and young French- and U.S.-educated leaders who are gaining influence with Jean-Claude Duvalier, who took power after his father died in 1971, dismissed five government ministers immediately after the rioting.

One popular district governor said the riots weren't directed at Duvalier, but at ineffective local government leaders.

"This (the protests) is one of the most positive trends I've seen," said Harlan H. Hobgood, head of the U.S. Agency for International Development in Haiti.

"Haiti's government response has been measured, and absent of traditional violence that has characterized government reaction to popular protest in the past," said Hobgood, a diplomat with more than 20 years' experience in Latin America and West Africa.

Congress now ties financial aid to Haiti with progress in human rights.

The latest U.S. State Department human rights report credits Jean-Claude with "eliminating the murders and disappearances which took place under his father," but said "abuses continued to occur." Fraud and intimidation of opponents, for example, marred some of the legislative assembly elections held last year.

The chain of recent disturbances in Haiti started May 29 in Gonaïves, on the northwestern coast of Haiti, when police beat a pregnant woman. Incensed by what they said was the latest incident of police brutality, residents marched on the police station. Rock-throwing and looting continued until May 24, when several truckloads of soldiers from the capital dispersed the mob.

That same week, a policeman wounded a teen-age girl in the nearby town of Bombardopolis, sparking fighting with police.

On May 29, as many as five people were killed when police fired at rioters who tried to storm a food warehouse of the international relief agency, CARE, in Cap-Haitien.

Wheat declared unfit for humans was ordered sent from the CARE facility to a government farm to feed pigs and chickens. Police forcibly kept people from claiming the food in the nearby town of Milot.

Odeleon Jean Baptiste, an unemployed carpenter, estimated that half the 4,000 residents in the Shada community then surrounded the CARE warehouse, which is within the Cap-Haitien slum. CARE employees barricaded themselves inside, while police fired to break up the crowd.

CELTICS: Champs continue tradition

production from all five players because they know each other's capabilities and limitations. Celtic coach K.C. Jones had two outside shooters in Danny Ainge and Brad Wellman and a replacement center-forward in Kevin McHale. When these players came off the bench they just went out and played. The Lakers' specialty players wouldn't try anything out of their specialty and Boston used that to their advantage. Even with all of this specialization going on, Los Angeles could have won the series four games to none. But the Celtics have the tradition of 14 World Championship banners hanging from the Boston Gardens. They made adjustments on the Lakers' specialty players and beat them at their own game. As the different Laker players were brought in, the Celtics changed the way they played.

AND WHO needs air conditioning anyway? What better way to get closer to the home team than by sweating with them? In Los Angeles, the fans (who are a bunch of actors and singers like Jack Nicholson and Dionne Warwick), sit comfortably in air conditioned luxury boxes. Boston patrons (who are just commoners), get to sweat it out together. The fans seem to be more real than all the fancy cultured folks on the West Coast. They were ecstatic that the Celtics won a game, let alone the championship. The Lakers' fans are more subdued and do not yell as loud as Boston fans.

The simple fact is that the Celtics own another World Championship and the threat of Laker supremacy has once again been put down. The Lakers have a young team full of talent and will return to the NBA Championship Series. But as long as the Celtics are in the title game too, they'll always have that Celtic tradition and the luck of the Irish on their side.

CAMP: Baseball's the word

toward game situations. "Proper technique has a lot to do with thinking," Jones said. "We try to make the players think about what they're doing. For example, a player needs to think about his footwork when he cuts off a throw from the outfield."

The participants at the camp come from different locations across the Midwest. But Jones feels the bulk of the players in this session have come from the Chicago area. He said 36 players came from suburban Chicago's Marian Catholic High School.

"This year I have to say that most of the players came from Northern Illinois," Jones said. "But we get them from most everywhere. We've got players from the St. Louis area, Kentucky and Southern Illinois also."

With the huge turnover from year to year, it is difficult for Jones to remember every player who has participated in the camp. In fact, some players that Jones had forgotten have later returned and became members of the Saluki baseball team.

"I've had guys like Jay Bellissimo, Scott Bridges, Mike Blumhorst and Gary Bockhorn come here, but we don't remember them because they were too young at the time," Jones said.

Everyone is given equal treatment at the camp and Jones said he doesn't single out the more talented players.

"We don't tell a player how good he is or how hard he can throw," Jones said. "We are here to improve the players' technique."

The first session of the camp will run through June 15, with a second session scheduled for June 17 through 22. Jones expects over 300 players to participate in the two sessions.

"As far as I know, this is the largest camp in the Midwest," Jones said. "Other camps have been started in the area, but they haven't caught on for various reasons."

TRACK: Recruits signed

Kelly to provide immediate strength to the cross country program, too.

"Cross country in New York is a strong, well-established sport, so Patricia's accomplishments speak well for her," DeNoon said. "She comes from a good program and has the kind of self-confidence to compete nationally. I expect her to move immediately into SIU's all-time top five in cross country."

Kelly is expected to run in the 1,500 and 3,000-meter events for the Salukis' track squad next spring. She will help an area which has been a weak spot for SIU-C in the past.

Nease is a high school state champion in the 800- and 1,600-meters. She led her high school to a West Virginia state championship in both track and cross country last season. DeNoon said her primary event will be the 1,500-meters.

"Dawn has been running only three years or so," DeNoon said. "She has a tremendous amount of natural talent but comes from a relatively new program. She has a winning attitude but has never trained at the 5,000 distances. I look forward to seeing what she can do after strenuous workouts and more individual attention."

Fisk injured; Sox shuffle to shore up

CHICAGO (AP) -- The Chicago White Sox on Wednesday placed veteran Carlton Fisk on the 15-day disabled list and recalled Joel Skinner from their Denver affiliate in a bid to shore up the catching corps.

Fisk, suffering from a pulled abdominal muscle, is hitting .197 with six home runs and 17 runs batted in. The White Sox have used Marc Hill behind the plate to back up Fisk. Skinner has appeared in 10 games, hitting at a .200 clip with the parent club.

In another move, the team sent Casey Parsons back to Denver and purchased the contract of Steve Christmas, who played behind Skinner at the Triple A affiliate.

Christmas is hitting .357 with one homer and seven RBIs at Denver.

Celtics perspired to continue a winning tradition

Three cheers for tradition. Once again, tradition won out as the Boston Celtics beat the Los Angeles Lakers for their 15th National Basketball Association Championship Tuesday night.

It was the speed and flash of the Lakers against the size and determination of the Celtics. So much for speed and flash.

Not to take anything away from the Lakers — they're a great team — but if people wanted to see a speed show like Los Angeles displays, they would go to a track meet.

Los Angeles' Earvin "Magic" Johnson may be one of the best offensive guards in the NBA (he should be, he's a quick forward playing guard), but he made some critical mistakes that cost the Lakers three games. On the other hand, Boston's point guard, Gerald Henderson, turned in steady performances.

From the Press Box

Duane Crays

He moved the ball upcourt, passed to the open man and got the crucial steal in the second game when the Celtics needed it most.

BOSTON GUARD Dennis Johnson overcame a terrible offensive start to score 20 or more points in the last four games. He also did a good job defensively on Johnson. Laker guard Michael Cooper did just the opposite — provided good defensive support against Larry Bird early in the series, but little offensive help when the Lakers needed it.

At the center position, the Lakers had the best in Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. He is their main offensive weapon and the classiest player in the NBA. But one man can't carry a team — especially in an NBA Championship. Celtic center Robert Parrish didn't do anything particularly well during the series, but he turned in good, well-rounded performances for seven games.

Celtic forward Cedric Maxwell grabbed many offensive rebounds and shot well from the free throw line during the series — important considering he was fouled often. Laker forward James Worthy did everything on offense that a player can do, but it's too bad he didn't play defense. Contrary to popular belief, teams do play defense in the NBA. It's just more subtle than in the National Football League.

AT FORWARD. Bird has no peer. Not Julius Erving, not Bernard King, not Worthy. Bird isn't flashy. He just plays good, solid basketball day in and day out. That's why he was named Championship Series Most Valuable Player. Laker forward Kurt Rambis is the closest thing Los Angeles has to an old-fashioned player like Bird. He gets a little respect for that.

Both teams had deep bench strength that was used heavily during the series. Los Angeles had a bench of specialized players that are used in the right situations. Boston had back-up centers, forwards and guards ready to play at all times. Specialization helped the Lakers advance to the Championship Series, but that same specialization backfired when the Lakers couldn't get their role players into the game when they were needed.

Lakers' coach Pat Riley had shot-blockers, pass-blockers, three-point play specialists, sprinters and shot putters. In short, Riley had specialized substitutes. That hurt him when he had to call time outs to insert his specialists. It gave Boston time to catch their breath and make adjustments.

BOSTON STARTED each game with a set lineup and played those five for the majority of the game. This system results in good, steady

Baseball's tops in Itchy's camp

By Mike Frey
Staff Writer

Many of the athletic camps that flourish across the country this time of year resemble a military boot camp, with emphasis placed on discipline and conditioning.

However, at the 12th annual Saluki baseball camp, which began its first of two sessions June 10 at Abe Martin field, there is little evidence of a gung-ho atmosphere.

SIU-C baseball coach Itchy Jones began the camp in 1973 for the purpose of helping high school players with the fundamental skills of baseball. Jones has operated his camp in a relaxed atmosphere, where the participants are automatically placed at ease.

"I think that most camps are run to get people into shape," Jones said. "But we're concerned entirely with fundamentals and technique. We stay away from conditioning."

Jones uses high school and college coaches to aid him in instructing 155 athletes in the fine points of the game. The participants are grouped according to the position they play, but each player receives individual attention.

"We don't get into the team concept," Jones said. "We let their coaches in the summer leagues worry about that. We concentrate on individual work. If a player thinks there is something he needs to work on, he just tells us and we'll help him out."

Jones runs morning and afternoon sessions and also organizes games in the evening. The batting cages are almost constantly in operation.

"The (batting) machines go on at 7:45 a.m. and go until 5 p.m.," Jones said. "Then we turn them on for an hour and a half at night. We bring each group in for a session in the morning and then the players can hit on their own later. Each player gets 200 or more swings a day."

The coaches also put the athletes through strategy discussions where they try to get them to adapt their thinking

Don DeNoon depending on track recruits

By Mike Frey
Staff Writer

SIU-C women's track coach Don DeNoon used the break between spring and summer semesters to bring in his first class of recruits.

DeNoon, who recently completed his first season as a Saluki coach by leading the women to a third-place finish in the Gateway Conference, signed three athletes. The trio are expected to make major contributions to the SIU-C squad next spring.

The top recruit is Felecia Veal, from Saginaw, Mich. Veal was the Michigan state champion in the 110-yard hurdles in 1983. Her 14.2 time in the event is slightly better than the SIU-C record (14.7) set by Mary Shirk in 1978.

DeNoon said Veal should be able to qualify for the NCAA finals in her freshman season.

"She's certainly one of the top hurdlers in the country," DeNoon said. "A lot of other schools (including Nebraska, two-time indoor national champions) wanted her badly. With her ability, she'll have an instant impact on our program. Her best time would have come close to winning the conference last spring."

Veal was undefeated in the 110 hurdles this season. She is also an outstanding quarter-miler and will be counted on to help replace graduated senior Debra Davis. Davis is SIU-C's second all-time leading scorer.

"Felecia is going to shore up a weak area in the 100-meter hurdles and make us just as strong as we have been in other areas," DeNoon said. "Her range in different events will be a luxury and will make our team even more solid."

The other two signees, Patricia Kelly of Staten Island, N.Y., and Dawn Nease of Parkersburg, W. Va., will run both cross country and track for the Salukis.

Kelly led Tottenville High School to a fourth-place finish in New York cross country. She finished eighth in the New York State Federation Cross Country Championships in 1982 and 1983.

DeNoon said he is counting on

With summer just one week away, outdoor activities are on the rise and the SIU-C intramural-recreational sports program has a large schedule of events to keep even the most active participant busy.

Eighteen intramural sports are slated for this summer, with softball and basketball heading the list. Play begins June 25.

"Basketball and softball are always our most popular sports," said Joyce Craven, coordinator of intramural sports. "They're the most basic team sports and are the most requested."

Because of the large international student population during the summer, Craven said intramural sports is aiming some of its activities toward them.

"We've taken a lot of our traditional sports, like tennis and racquetball, and have expanded them to include table tennis and badminton," Craven said. "Those two sports are very popular with the international students."

Traditional sports, however, aren't the only events being offered. Ultimate frisbee, disc golf and horseshoe pitching begin in early July, along with a two-person canoe race set for July 17.

"We always try to get an idea of the students' needs," said Craven, "because the students always want some kind of activity."

Craven said her biggest worry in the summer is the weather. If the weather stays unbearably hot, she said, students tend to stay indoors.

"We're heading into the very hot months and the outdoor sports will suffer, especially if the weather stays like it has this week," Craven said. "People just can't stay outside for very long."

All outdoor sports will begin between 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. Volleyball, normally an outdoor sport, will be moved indoors for the summer. Indoor sports will start at 5 p.m. and end at 9 p.m.

Intramural sports offers three different skill levels for the participants. The "A" classification is for the more advanced athlete, while the "B" level is for the intermediate athlete. The "C" division is purely recreational and is more structured.

"We get some very competitive teams in all classifications," Craven said. "But just because the skill level is different doesn't mean the competitive level is any different."

The "A" captain's meeting for the team events has been scheduled for Monday at the Recreation Center and it is the last day to register for a team. Craven said students can sign up for a team at the information desk in the Recreation Center.
